LDD1 Sociologie et Science Politique

Licence Double-Diplôme (Undergraduate double degree)
Specialisation Sociologie, Science politique
Language(s) of instruction
French

The dual degree (LDD) in sociology and political science offers a dual-discipline program combining two social science disciplines. It provides students with a solid foundation in the analysis of social and political phenomena (labor, the environment, public policy, social movements, political life, etc.). It also stands out for its advanced teaching of qualitative and quantitative social science methods.

The Sociology-Political Science LDD is based on the teachings of two bachelor's degrees, the bachelor's degree in sociology and the bachelor's degree in political science, and awards 240 ECTS credits. During the program, students address a variety of contemporary social and political issues (work, organizations, cities, the environment, economic life, political life, the functioning of the state, public policy, gender, political ideas, etc.). The program combines theoretical disciplinary knowledge with methodological knowledge. Students are trained in qualitative methods (interviews, observations) and quantitative methods (questionnaires) and data analysis. Additional introductory courses are offered (language, career discovery, etc.).
